Thomas R. Knight is a registered patent attorney and associate at Andrus Intellectual Property Law.

Thomas focuses his practice on domestic and international patent and trademark prosecution and enforcement. He counsels clients regarding patentability and infringement issues and provides written patentability and clearance opinions.

Thomas joined the firm after graduating with honors from the Marquette University Law School. While at Marquette, Thomas was elected and served as President of the Intellectual Property Law Society.

Prior to attending the Marquette University Law School, Thomas earned a bachelor of science degree in biomedical engineering from the University of Wisconsin-Madison in 2007. He subsequently worked for several years in engineering, manufacturing, and operational roles for a Fortune 10 corporation. During this time, Thomas also earned a masters degree in business administration (MBA) from Marquette University.

Thomas is admitted to practice law before the Supreme Court of Wisconsin and is a member of the Wisconsin Intellectual Property Law Association, American Bar Association, and the State Bar of Wisconsin.
